“ I started working in the same warehouse as Anthony around 5 months ago. I was going through a big transitional phase in my life with starting my first professional job after college, having to move to a new area, trying to meet people and make new friends, and whatnot. I remember one day we just started talking and we were able to just hit it off. It was very nice to have someone to talk to especially after a long day at work for me. I also appreciated how friendly he was to me especially since I barely knew anyone else in the area. I'll cherish the moments we had together and it'll never be the same with him gone.
